Nitrogen Needed for Small Grains

The use of nitrogen as a top dressing is particularly important following high yields of crops during the previous growing season, when large amounts of plant food nutrients were used.

Soil fertility is a primary factor in determining the amount of nitrogen to use. On medium fertile soils, 20 to 25 pounds per acre will usually be enough. Low fertility or sandy soils generally need more nitrogen, probably up to 50 pounds per acre.

Soils with high fertility will not usually need additional nitrogen, particularly those with high organic content. Nitrogen should be used with care to prevent lodging of small grain. However, any nitrogen that can be used up to the point of promoting lodging, will be profitable if applied at the proper time.

On soils low in phosphrous and potash, a complete fertilizer applied at the rate to give the suggested amounts of nitrogen is recommended. Tests have shown that early applications are most profitable; G. R. Epperson, Associate Agronomist at VPI suggests top dressing before March 1 in the southern Piedmont. Nitrogen should be applied before there is much growth of the crop. Late applications of nitrogen tend to stimulate growth of straw at the expense of grain.

Nitrogen top dressing is doubly important on small grains that will be used for grazing, silage and hay. Higher rates may be used in these casing as lodging becomes less likely when the crops are harvested early.

Small grains that were heavily grazed in the fall and early winter, and which will be grazed in the spring, will need more nitrogen than those used for grain only or those grazed lightly.

Fewer Laborers, Higher Wages

The oft-time headline "Farm Employment Lower - Farm Wage Rates Higher," is an apt summary for the farm labor outlook for the next several years, believe agricultural economists at VPI.

They point out that industrial development in Virginia continues to move forward rapidly, and each new industry brings a demand for labor to be drawn primarily from the rural areas. Farmers will have to compete with this industrial development for their hired labor supply.

The average wage rate paid by Virginia farmers in 1954 was $0.571 per hour. Available data indicate that 1955 labor costs will average about the same. During 1956, the farm labor situation will be similar, with perhaps a slight rise in the cash wage rate. Farm laborers will continue to shift to non-farm employment.

The family labor supply which reached its peak on Virginia farms in 1943 when many men were in the armed services, has dropped fairly steadily since that time. The number of hired workers on farms has decreased sharply since 1929. The trend is apt to continue indefinitely.

The economists say this is not an unhealthy trend. Many farm people have been "under-employed" during the past 55 years. The lack of continuous productive work on the farm, a result of small farm businesses and inadequate capital supporting farm workers, is a major cause of Virginia's low-income farm problem.

Competition from non-farm employment in the future will not be confined to wage rates, the economists say. Farmers will also have to consider the fringe benefits which laborers often receive from industry, such as health and accident insurance plans, vacations with pay, sick leave, shorter hours, etc. All will increase farm labor costs per hour. To offset this rising cost, farmers must find other ways to increase labor efficiency to lower the labor cost per unit of produce.

Use Wire to Protect Berries

One inch poultry wire will keep birds from ruining the fruit crop on berry plants or small trees. Mesh wire can be stretched over the trees and plants needing protection. The original cost of the wire may be somewhat high but if cared for, it may be used for ten or more years.

Put Up Good Fencing

If you are planning to fence in some pasture this spring, it will pay you to buy good materials that will last a long time. Now is a good time to plan the fencing that will be needed and to locate sources of treated posts as naturally, long-lived hardwoods are getting more difficult to find each year. Treated posts will last twenty to thirty years or longer. A new bracing, using horizontal wood and diagonal wire braces, is being recommended. On level ground the braces should be a maximum of 40 yards apart. On hilly ground the braces should be closer together, depending on contour of the land.

Buy good grade wire. The heavier wire is longer lasting and will stands rough usage. For a good combination fence which will serve for sheep, hogs, and cattle, use a 32" woven wire with two strands of barbed wire on top. The new L-shaped stronghold staple with threaded shank is the best staple to use. Get the low-carbon steel for treated softwoods, the hardened high-carbon steel staple for hardwood. If the L-shaped staple is not available, use the long U-shaped 1½" staple for treated wood.

Garden Question Box

Q.- Can an arborvitae that is too tall be cut back several feet without killing it?

A.- Yes, the upright form can be cut back several feet. Early spring, just before growth starts, is the time to cut them back. The globe arborvitae cannot be cut back as severely.

Q.- Just recently, I set out two shade trees in my front yard. Is there any special care I should give these trees this winter?

A. Be sure the trees have been staked or guyed. Mulch with straw or sawdust. Water if needed. Wrap the trunk with burlap.

Q. When should boxwood be pruned?

A. Pruning boxwood is a necessary and important operation. The best time for pruning is just before growth starts in the spring. Start by removing weak and crowded branches from the top center of the plant. Where necessary, shorten the larger branches. Continue this thinning of branches over the entire upper half of plant. This operation will keep plant at the desired size. In dwarf plants, remove all dead leaves that have fallen into branches.

Carver-Price School News

Hello Readers! First semester exams begin next Tuesday, January 24, and extend through Wednesday, January 25. Some hard questions we are all expecting!

The New Homemakers of America held their regular meeting Monday, January 16. They planned their Installation Service for January 30.

Last Friday night the Varsity and J. V.'s journeyed to Robert R. Moton High School in Farmville for their basketball games. The Varsity was defeated 51 - 31. The J. V.'s lost also. The return game with Moton will be played here on February 13. Don't forget our next home game—next Friday night, January 27th, with Charlotte Court House.

The Senior Class held their regular class meeting on Tuesday, January 17. They planned an Educational Trip to Williamsburg early in March.

The 11th grade is sponsoring a party, February 10, for the benefit of the "Miss Carver Contest."

The 8th grade class is presenting the "Toast of the Town," January 26, starring Kent Paige as Master of Ceremonies. The program will be divided into two parts. Part I is the Hit Parade, and Part II is a variety show. Sounds interesting.

The 9th grade will present a Talent Show January 31 with representatives from the various classes participating.

We are urging the members in the young ladies communities to give them the hearty support they will need to raise money to win the title of Miss Carver-Price. The representatives from the various classes are:

Grade 6-f: Kate Jones, Virginia Lamberth.
Grade 6-H: Mildred Johnson, Emma Hancock and Martha Carter.
Grade 7: Loretta Hunter, Alease Ferguson.
Grade 7: Jenny Mae Burns, Daisy McCoy, Helen Preston.
Grade 8: Rosetta Lipford, Valetta McCoy, Alice Austin.
Grade 9: Gladys Patterson, Mabel Jackson, Maggie Ferguson.
Grade 10: Carrie Austin.
Grade 11: Mary Goode, Harolyn Walker, Clara Ferguson.
Grade 12: Viola Johnson, Henrietta Ferguson, Gloria Jenkins.

The sixth grade under the direction of Mrs. T. W. Hamlet played their basegeball game last Friday against the other division of the sixth grade under the direction of Mrs. H. R. Foster. The score was 14-11, the section under Mrs. Hamlet winning. The players on the winning team were: Beatrice James, right forward with 8 points; Luvenia Booker, center forward with 4 points; Emma Hancock, left forward with 2 points. Guards were Mildred Johnson, Mary Woolridge, Bertha Woolridge, Martha Carter, and Elva McCoy, susbstituting. These classes are planning another game soon. It was much fun to see them in action.

This class reports their science activity also. Mrs. Hamlet brought a lemon and orange tree to school early in September. Every member of the class had a fair chance to water it. Many visited the room to see the plants. The orange rotted but the lemon did not. Mrs. Hamlet pulled the fruit from the lemon plant in order that it might ripen. Then on January 5, lemonade was made out of it, by the girls on the food committee.

"The reward of one duty is the power to fulfill another."
